

Fiber Optic Cable Factory Shelf Label Price

AI Overview

Fiber optic cable factory shelf labels typically range from $0.05 to $1 per label depending on material, durability, and quantity purchased. Price Overview The cost of fiber optic cable labels varies widely based on material, size, adhesive type, and environmental resistance. Standard vinyl or polyester labels suitable for indoor use often cost $0.05–$0.20 per label when purchased in bulk, while industrial-grade, UV-resistant, abrasion-proof labels designed for outdoor or harsh environments can range from $0.50 to $1 per label. Pre-printed or color-coded labels with sequential numbering or QR codes may increase the price further. Factors Affecting Price Material: Vinyl is flexible and water-resistant, suitable for most indoor and outdoor applications, while polyester offers superior heat and chemical resistance for industrial environments. Durability: Labels designed to withstand UV exposure, moisture, and abrasion cost more but ensure long-term legibility. Quantity: Bulk orders significantly reduce per-label cost; small packs or single labels are more expensive. Printing Type: Writable labels or those compatible with laser/thermal printers may have higher upfront costs but allow customization. Compliance: Labels adhering to standards like TIA/EIA-606-A for telecom infrastructure may carry a premium. Purchasing Options Online marketplaces like Alibaba offer a wide range of fiber optic labels with bulk pricing and customization options. Specialized suppliers such as Fosco provide high-visibility markers, ID sleeves, and industrial-grade labels for fiber optic applications. Retail platforms like Amazon sell smaller packs of write-on or self-laminating tags suitable for labelling patch panels or factory shelves. Recommendation For factory shelf labeling, choose durable, adhesive-backed labels that can withstand handling and environmental conditions in your facility. Consider...
