

Hot-selling fiber optic fusion splicing equipment for railway communication

AI Overview

Fujikura, SEIKO FIRE, and KomShine are leading manufacturers of high-performance fiber optic fusion splicers widely used in railway communication networks. Leading Manufacturers Fujikura is a world-renowned brand in fusion splicing, recognized for its rugged, reliable, and fast field splicers. Their equipment is designed for harsh environments, making it ideal for railway communication applications. Fujikura offers a range of models from ultra-compact splicers to fully ruggedized units, all supported with 24/7 technical assistance and rapid service turnaround to minimize downtime in critical infrastructure projects. SEIKO FIRE is an ISO9001-certified manufacturer specializing in fiber optic equipment, including fusion splicers, OTDRs, and fiber cleavers. Their S-Series fusion splicers feature independent software and hardware design, automatic splicing capabilities, and lightweight, portable construction. SEIKO FIRE products are widely used in railway networks globally, including in Asia, Europe, and the Americas, and are known for reliability and ease of handling. KomShine is a professional Chinese manufacturer with over a decade of experience in optical communications. They provide six-motor trunk fusion splicers, FTTx splicers, and complete fusion tool sets. KomShine's OTDRs and splicing equipment are widely deployed in railways, coal mines, and industrial networks, offering high precision, fast splicing, and comprehensive field solutions.

Key Features for Railway Applications

- Ruggedness and durability for outdoor and mobile railway environments
- Fast splicing and heating times to maintain network uptime
- Portability for field deployment along tracks and remote stations
- Compatibility with multiple fiber types (SM, MM, NZ-DS, EDF)
- Integrated fiber identification and core alignment for precise splicing
- Global technical support and authorized distribution to ensure service...
